

Corruption, Average and Education

It's been 10 years since the Convention of the United Nations against Corruption became effective in the search for a more effective fight against those people that use the institutions for their own benefits.

Basically, it is about mediocre people, who have been playing down values and respect to the others. People that have been emptying of quality their "be a person" and corrupt the organisations and the media for his own personal benefit.

A person become in a mediocre one when he thinks and behaves giving preference to his own interests and personal benefit instead of the common weal.

The best fight against the mediocrity is education, ethics, philosophy, arts, etc. This topics have a socialising function, they help us coexist in harmony and get us ready in the search of the common weal for all the mankind.

“ The education builds values and creativity, no mediocrity. ”

Do you know what is behind the objects and products of our daily life?

What's behind a cup of coffee?

The little Bu and the grandma Kim-ly work many hours, with a very low salary, so that the profit goes to big brands and multinationals.

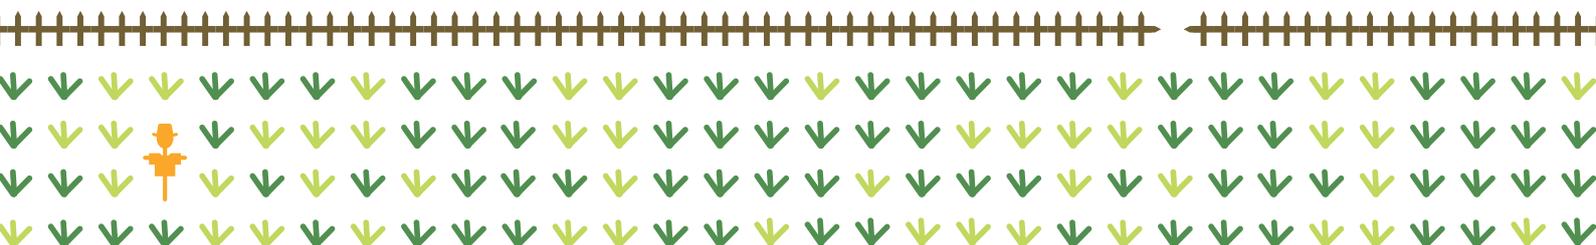

Coffee is one of the products that are usually put as an example to show the difference between fair trade and commerce that is not.

Is it important how products made we consume?

What questions can I wonder to decide between current products or fair trade?

You can see the little story here:

CARRO DE COMBATE

Tan Crew. Consume is a political act

“Never doubt that a small group of thoughtful, committed citizens can change the world; indeed, it’s the only thing that ever has” (Margaret Mead)

It’s been more than three years that the “Tank Crew” project has been running. You can find out about it in its blog, dedicated to know the origin of things we consume and what are the consequences.

“Tank Crew” look for solutions to make the world more livable for all people and not just for a few.
